	Existing reservoirs		 Knowledge repository for Non-Wood Forest Products

What? How? Why?

What? How? Why?

- The exclusive: Cannot achieve project visual identity or “exclusivity” in existing reservoirs.
- The navel-gazer: No other adequate topic-specific reservoirs exist or meet their requirements.
- The big-player: They plan a big collection of knowledge objects that can stand alone.
- The cookie-cutter: They need an on-line database and CMS to enter, edit and publish dozens of factsheets using the same layout.
- The straightforward: As it is practical knowledge, their end-users do not have strong requests on open access, FAIR principles and metadata.

Best practices and obstacles

Obstacles

1. Data gets all attention
2. Small projects lack of specialised technical staff on open access, FAIR, IPR
3. Search for exclusivity, navel-gazing
4. Think of itself as independent
5. Long-term maintenance, the multilingual headache...

Practical knowledge is missing its own Zenodo

Best practices

1. Plan your metadata and IPR licenses
2. Plan ahead or outsource
3. Sacrifice some exclusivity
4. Embrace community
5. Scout for high-quality reservoirs

How to guarantee good quality of Knowledge Objects?

The editorial process

- ...easier to say than to implement!

Interoperability and future collaboration

From the perspective of a project coordinator

Who pays for the current lack of interoperability?

€ 15,000

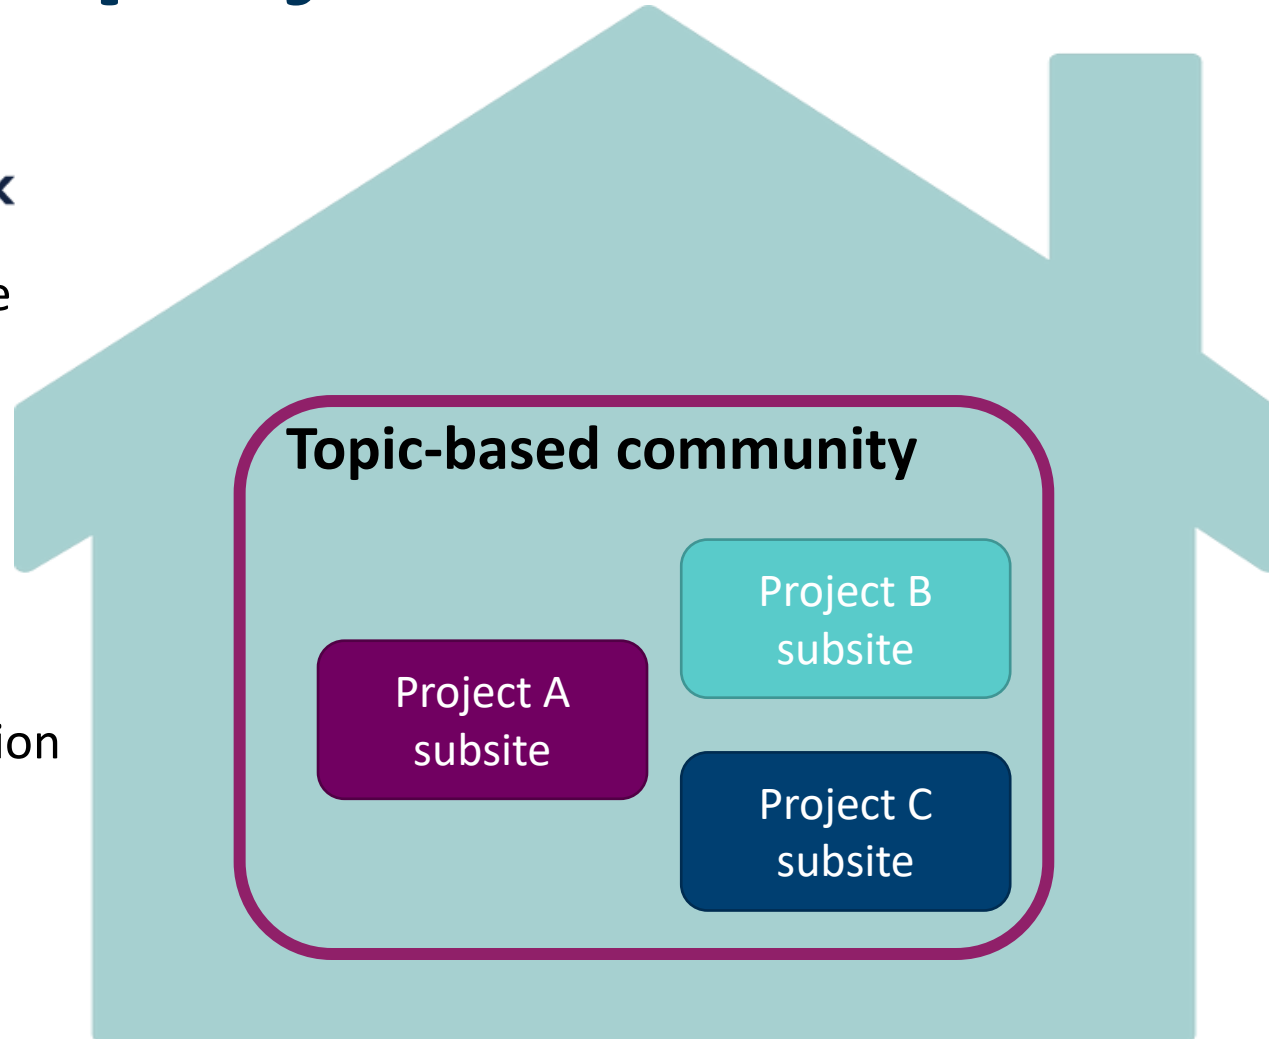

€ 10,000

For new projects

- Metadata structure
- Open access
- FAIR principles
- GDPR compliance
- IPR licenses
- Ontologies
- Vocabularies
- Automatic translation
- Social network
- Curation
- Hosting
- Maintenance
- etc.

Wishlist

- Some visual identity
- Manage collections
- Knowledge objects as a customisable database filled-in through an on-line form
- Editorial process embedded
- Manage (external) contributors
